

FITTING: Farrah Fawcett

Real Angel Fawcett is laid to rest

BY LIZ HODGSON

CHARLIE'S ANGELS star Farrah Fawcett will have a fitting funeral at the Cathedral of Our Lady of the Angels.

The private service at the downtown Los Angeles landmark will be held at 4pm on Tuesday.

Fawcett died on Thursday in Santa Monica after a three-year battle with anal cancer, with her longtime love Ryan O'Neal and close friend Alana Stewart by her side.

Redmond O'Neal, her 24-year-old son with Ryan, will be given a day pass from prison to attend the service. He is serving a year in a jail rehab programme for violating probation on a heroin possession charge.

A source says a second private memorial will be held at the exclusive Jonathan Club on the beach in Santa Monica, also on Tuesday.

Difficult

"Although this is an extremely difficult time, we take comfort in the beautiful times that we shared with Farrah over the years and the knowledge that her life brought joy to so many people," Ryan O'Neal said.

In Farrah's Story, which aired on U.S. TV last month, she made public her painful treatments and dispiriting setbacks – from shaving her hair before chemotherapy to undergoing experimental treatments in Germany.

"Her big message to people is don't give up. No matter what they say to you, keep fighting," Alana Stewart said. NBC estimated the May 15, 2009, broadcast drew nearly nine million viewers.

SHOCKING: Drugs were as easy to buy as a pint in Limerick's Trinity Rooms

BY DARAGH KEANY, NIAMH BYRNE and PAUL WILLIAMS

A MAJOR Sunday World investigation today exposes one of the country's best-known 'super' nightclubs as a glorified drug den – where cocaine and ecstasy are as easy to buy as a pint.

Our undercover reporters managed to buy some of the most potent cocaine available on Irish streets in Limerick's Trinity Rooms – which was formerly called Doc's.

In 2002 the club's security manager Brian Fitzgerald was murdered by members of the savage McCarthy/Dundon crime gang after he tried to stop them selling drugs in the club.

The brave dad of two threw out Larry McCarthy Junior and his cousins John and Dessie Dundon when he found out they were trying to establish a drug trade in the huge club.

As a result, these twisted savages launched a campaign of intimidation and threats against the bouncer before they finally sent hitman James Martin Cahill to get rid of their "problem".

Ruthless

Now, just seven years later, it appears that the ruthless thugs who have brought death and devastation to Limerick have got what they wanted – and are raking in a fortune selling drugs in the clubs and pubs around the city.

In May, over 5,000 local people took to the streets of Limerick in a massive show of solidarity with the family of the McCarthy/Dundons' latest innocent victim, Roy Collins.

At that huge rally the city's outspoken mayor John Gilligan remembered the gang's other innocent victims, Brian Fitzgerald and Shane Geoghegan. Despite the strong words and public outcry, our reporters found out first hand why these lowlife monsters continue to laugh at society.

The Trinity Rooms, which was also known at one time as Quarter, is one of the biggest nightclubs in the country, catering for up to 800 clubbers at a time.

We had received several tip-offs in recent months that drugs were widely available in the popular night spot so we sent two reporters to investigate – and what they uncovered was astonishing.
